

Find these pioneer tools exhibited in the barn and sketch them. Think about a modern tool or power tool that might do the same job. Is there still a need for each tool you see? Why or why not?

Froe-a knife-type wedge used to split shingles, laths, and clapboards	Mallet-once in wide-spread Use due to the rarity of iron hammers in early American history	Scorp-a finishing tool to hollow out wood for bowls	Auger-a tool to make a hole in wood	Adze-a tool that made surfaces smooth on a beam after being prepared by a broadaxe
Gouge-a round chisel	Crossdraw Saw-used in cutting logs into sections after a tree has been downed	Scythe-a blade on a bent lever to cut tall grasses or grains	Hayfork-a tool to move hay or grains from one location to another	Broadaxe-a kind of plane or striking chisel used for hewing round logs into square beams

Find these pioneer tools exhibited in the barn and sketch them. Think about a modern tool or power tool that might do the same job. Is there still a need for each tool you see? Why or why not?

--	--	--	--	--